LOUISBURG COLLEGE

LOUISBURG, NORTH CAROLINA

LOCATION

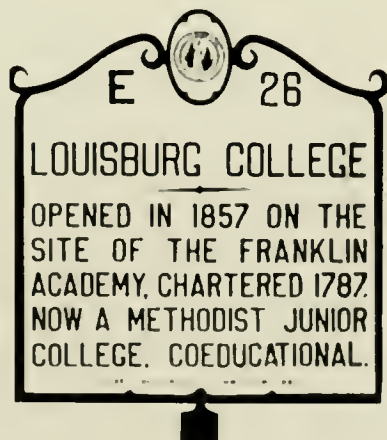

Louisburg College is located at Louisburg, the county seat of Franklin County, in eastern North Carolina. The College is situated on the highest points of land in the town, and its buildings command a fine view of the surrounding country and the valley of the Tar River. The town of Louisburg, with a population of about three thousand, contains few of the distractions of the city; but convenient bus transportation is available to nearby cities. It is about thirty miles northeast of Raleigh, the state capital, forty miles east of Durham, and about a hundred and fifty miles from the North Carolina beaches on the Atlantic.

Louisburg is the coeducational junior college of the North Carolina Annual Conference of The United Methodist Church. As a junior college it has served primarily three types of students: those who seek a solid academic foundation in order to transfer to a four-year college; those who seek to bridge the gap between high school and a large institution by attending a junior college capable of giving them personal attention; and those who plan terminal work at the freshman or sophomore level, as in business, medical technology or social work.

Ideally located in the heart of the progressive and growing area between the Piedmont and Coastal Plains, Louisburg enjoys a temperate climate. Annual mean temperature is 43 degrees in winter and 77 degrees in summer.

HISTORY

Evolving from three earlier institutions — Franklin Academy, Louisburg Female Academy, and Louisburg Female College — Louisburg College is the oldest chartered denominational junior college in the nation.

AWARENESS:
Eyes open and see just what they want to see.

A FINAL WARNING: TO ALL
RODENTS
IN FRANKLIN DORM !!

To one the world, the place, is old and decrepid.
To the other it is reborn, vibrant,
and expansive.

Yet both thrive on the same child-like faith and determination.
A cause — they must have a cause.

One is aware of faults and shortcomings. The other sees virtue, excellence, and progress. The information that supports each belief is sifted and shaped to fit the need. The belief, the cause, is the point about which all other thoughts and efforts become oriented. Ideas are formulated and fuse into a plan — be it right or wrong — for change . . .

CHANGES:

The lives rotate into new and different patterns, assume new roles, take on different meanings, reach for new goals. One sees what he believes to be wrong and tries to right it. The other sees what he considers to be good and attempts to cultivate it and see it multiply.

Each finds ways to justify his desire for change and the way he or she attempts to bring about that change. The more barriers that arise to block the course of change, the more determination each develops to handle the barriers. Each cause, each attempt at a goal is destined to do battle with fate. Each brainstorm is either a good idea or a bad idea at heart and will be accepted or rejected on those grounds. Each change must withstand the final test, each idea must face the final judge — response ...

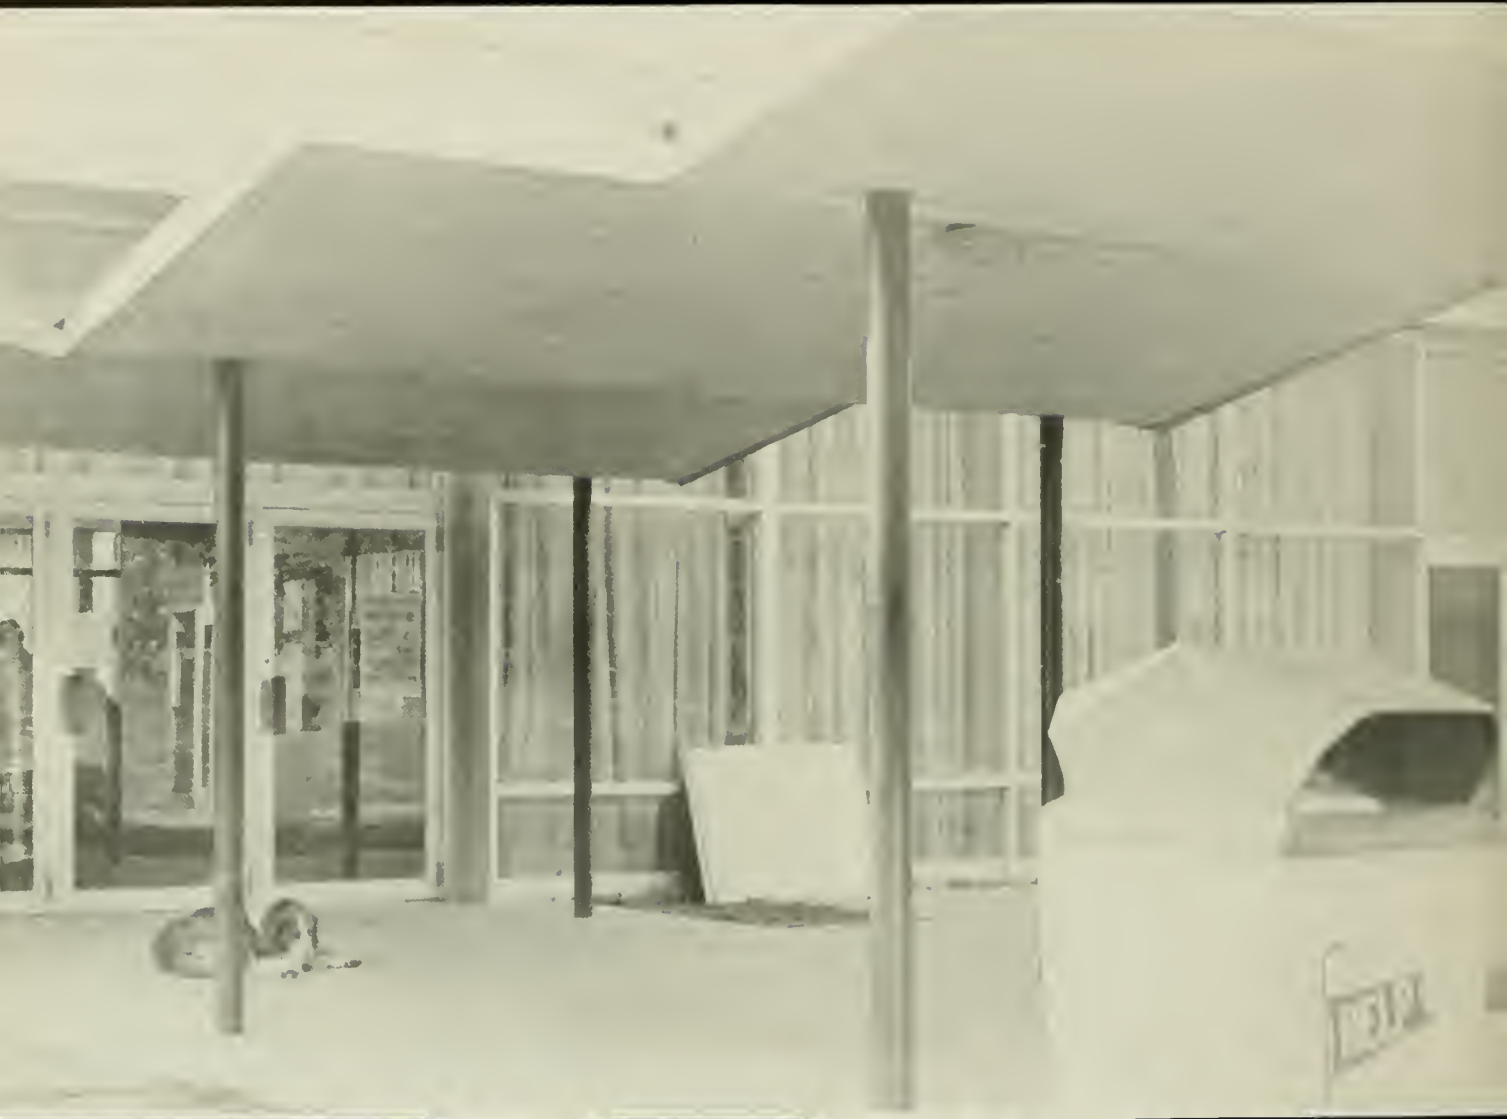

RESPONSE:

Each individual or group that is effected by a change must be taken into consideration before and after change occurs. Each effort will be judged by these people and they will determine whether or not the person behind the effort has struggled in vain. Change must be for the good of all concerned — it must consistent with the common will. Change must not choose favorites. Change must be ongoing, rejuvenating, enlightening, and emancipating in that it must free people from injustice, entrapment and ignorance. Response necessitates an awareness to the need for more responsible, progressive, and acceptable change . . .

But, some things never change . . .

Election '74: Demonstration of Apathy and Confusion

Conflict and confusion marked this year's class officer's election. At one point, it seemed as if people were going to have to be lassoed into running for an office. An assembly for the purpose of noninations had to be called.

Because the SGA held nominations open longer than it was supposed to, the Administrative Council declared the nominations null. The nomination procedure had to be completely reorganized. Finally, a set of officers was elected as a result of student body voting on September 30 and October 1. However, the turn out at the poles reflected a great deal of apathy on the part of the students. Sixty-four percent of the Sophomores voted, while only forty-nine percent of the Freshmen voted.

The Sophomores chose Johnny King as their President, Andy Parson as their Vice President, Ginny Gwaltney as their Secretary, and Betty Jo Boykin as their Treasurer. The Freshmen chose Dana Costin as their President, Jeff Edmonds as their Vice President, Shelley Forrest as their Secretary, and Pam Britt as their Treasurer.

Entertainment

There are of course, many forms of entertainment on campus. Things to keep students busy when study time is over, or a break from study.

There are dances, bands, keg parties, mud slides, tree papering contest, and many other "Student Projects" available.

Then if you feel a bit culture oriented, you can go pick up a humanities credit by seeing a play, a movie, art exhibits, musicians and guest speakers.

Well, if none of these things are happening at the moment, you can always go to Chics . . .

Remember?

It's already after eight, and you're late for class. What a way to start the day. You'll probably get kicked out this time. "Hey, that's my professor. He's late too." You were lucky this time. You are going to have to start going to be earlier.

Morning classes are over, time to eat.

Yeh, take a look, it's chicken again!

It's time to eat out.

The Dean wants to see me? What did I do this time?

"Let's skip afternoon classes and go for a ride or a walk, or something."

I can always do that assignment later . . .

Eight o'clock already?

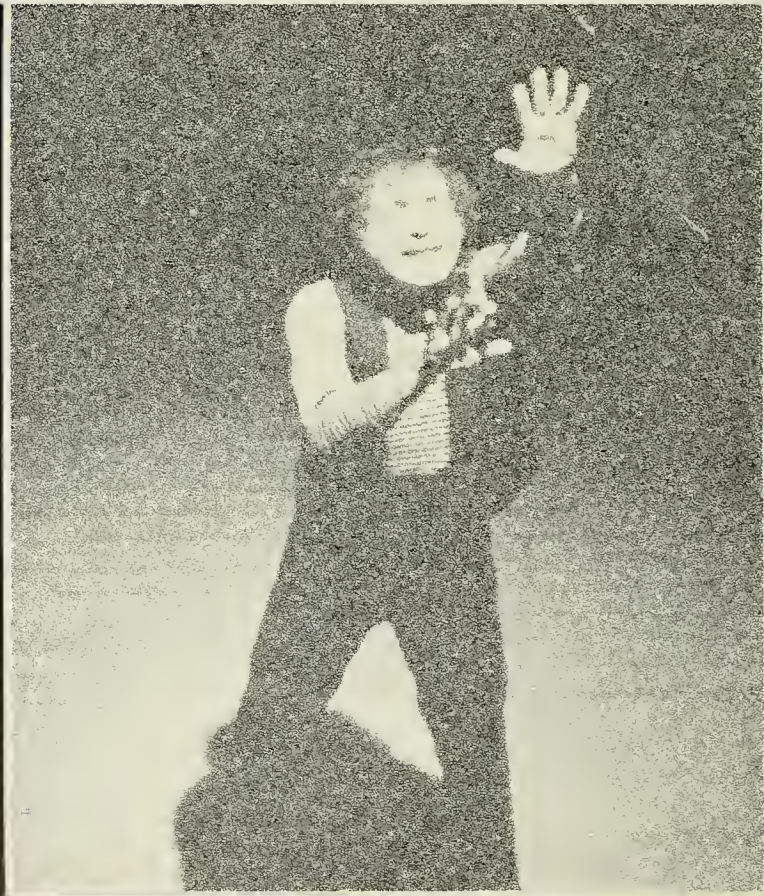

The morning was warm. The campus awaited visitors of all sizes, shapes, and colors. As the morning passed the college absorbed a new group of inhabitants into its personality. Parents brought their outlooks as they inspected their son's and daughter's new homes. Traveling in swarms from one event to another, they scrutinized the grounds and structures from every possible angle. However, the campus was not the only subject of close inspection. Soon the faculty and staff were brought under fire by inquisitive parents full of questions about Johnny's and Jane's progress as scholars. Some teachers took the questions well, and replied with relevant comments. Others were brick walls wearing big smiles and allowing questions to bounce off like rubber balls.

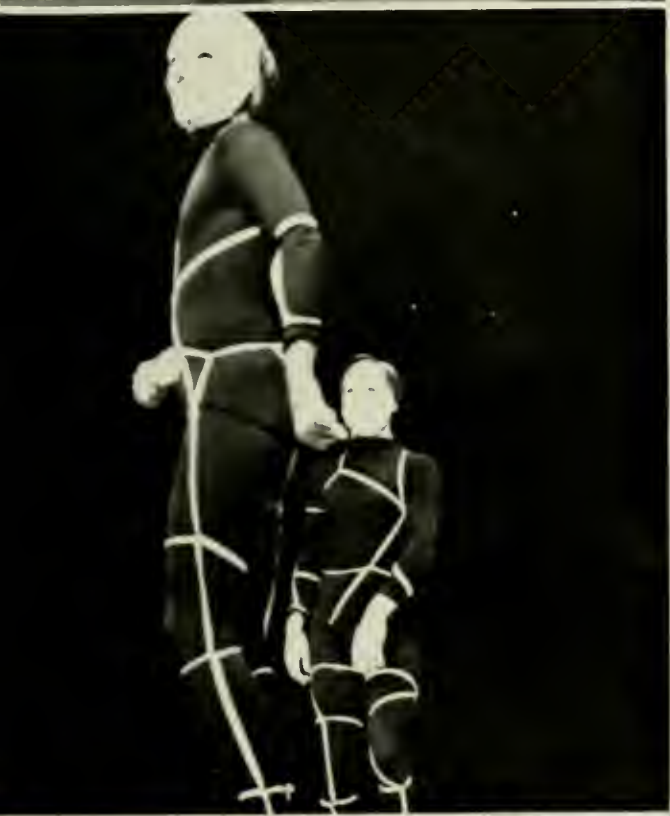

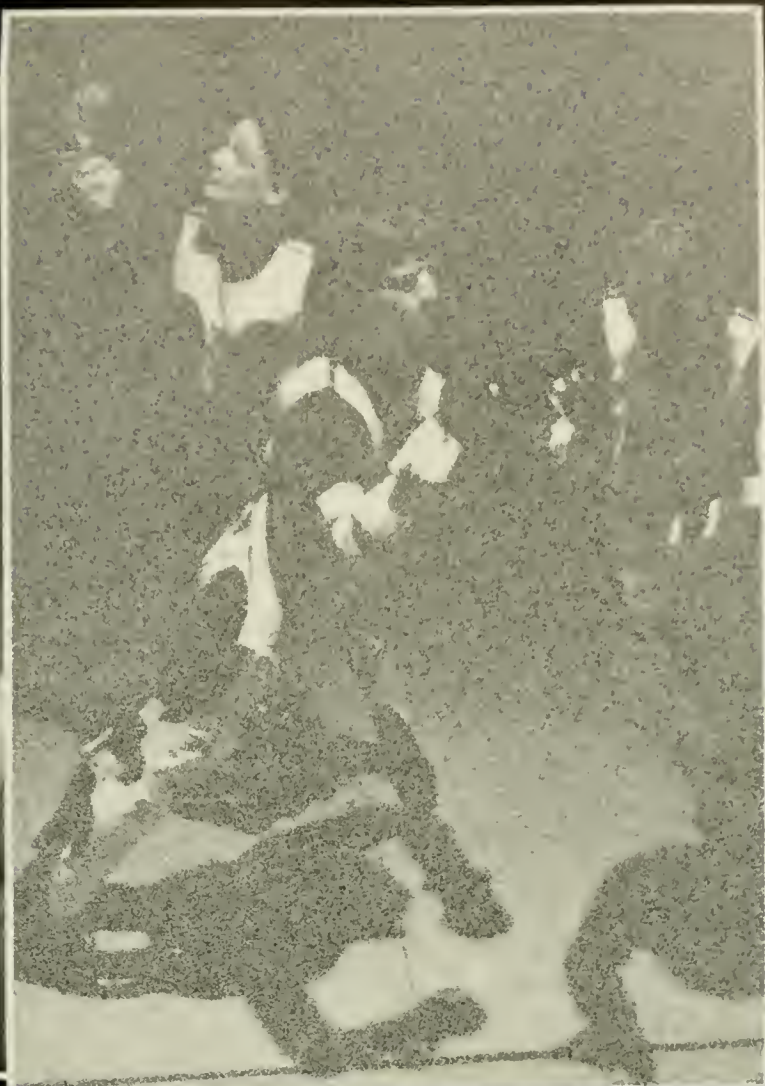

After visiting in the dorms and being graciously entertained by the house mothers, the parents were treated to the proverbial "Trustees' Lunch" which consists of all the good items that have been saved from student consumption and blessed for presentation to those of a higher priority. It was immediately after lunch that the hordes converged on the teaching staff and finally, in the late afternoon, their strength for the journey home was restored by means of a Tea that was held in the library.

They left with visions of sugar plums dancing in their heads. They were thoroughly convinced that everything they had seen was real. They believed, left satisfied, and the campus, faculty, staff, and students breathed a sigh of relief . . .

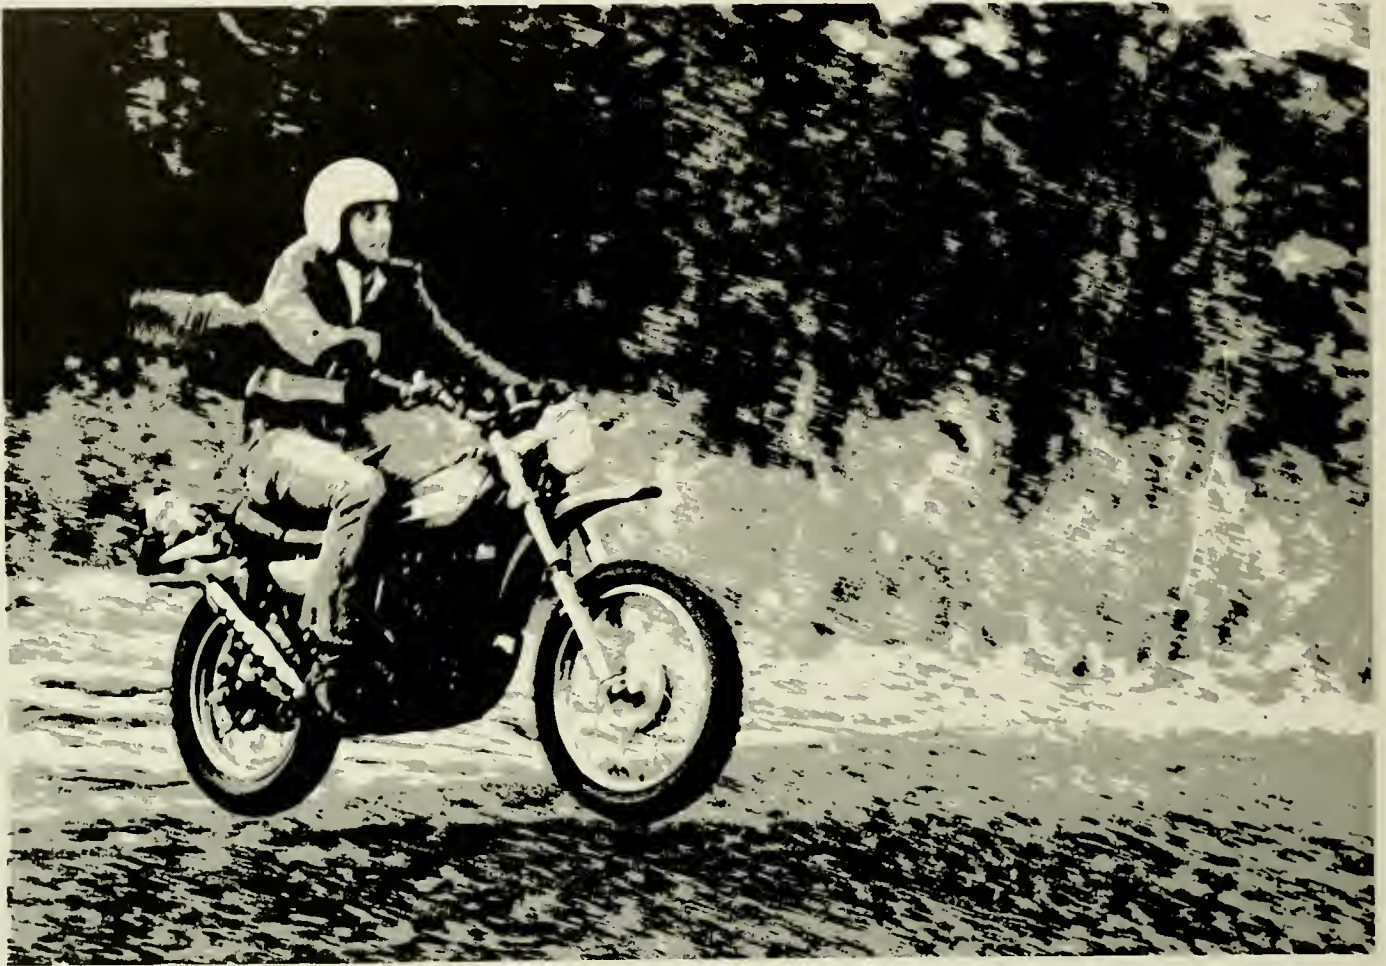

On the night of Tuesday, October 29, at 8:00, the campus had some visitors who make their way by communicating without the use of words. These people were the Claude Kipnis Mime Theatre. We did manage to get Claude Kipnis to speak with us. He gave us some thoughts that we would like to share.

"Mime is the way that one recreates the world non-verbally through his body."

"We ask our sponsors to keep us for a couple of days. This way we can give some workshops and lecture demonstrations in addition to a regular concert. I find this very rewarding. If you only come into a locality and do a hit and run operation, you have no chance to meet and work with the people. I like to be as active with the world as I can."

"Change is why there is hope in art. You cannot afford to do without it. In this case the picture would be pretty grim, so

To old and new students alike, the 1974 Fall Talent Show, sponsored by the SGA and the class officers, was a refreshing break from the mid-fall drudgeries of Louisburg College life. Weeknights have seldom been enjoyed so much by Louisburg students unless they were at the Showcase. The show was not only a chance for us to see our friends perform, but also a chance for the performers to test their talents, to see if they really could perform for an audience.

It certainly can not be said that the show was a polished production. The audience was subjected to long stretches of time between acts. Equipment faltered often. Yet the humanness of it made it all the more lovable. And then there was Master of Ceremonies Ken Tyson who smoothed over the rough spots with snatches of sheer zaniness. Finally, there were some unbelievable performances by some very talented people.

HALLOWEEN drifted in very peacefully but sputtered around till all hours of the night. As darkness fell upon us, a few masked monsters emerged into the quiet of the night, while a few shouted "Let's party!" Some students took the pleasure route to the National Guard Armory for a keg party. Others, particularly the Students For Christian Life, manned the McPharland House in order to pass out treats to kids who passed by. Many of these students were active on the night before when some 30 Louisburg College students and staff members put together a party for some foster kids.

It seemed like a traditional Louisburg College Halloween celebration, although threats of a food fight like last year's never materialized. Most seemed to enjoy themselves, some more than others. Perhaps the biggest break from tradition was that some gave up their time to make a few kids happy. A few hands reached out to help and received much more in return, like a child's smiling face and warm laughter.

In late November, Louisburg students enjoyed the traditional Homecoming festivities. On Friday night, the Star Spangled Washboard Band performed for us in the auditorium. Saturday afternoon was the time of the traditional keg party. On Saturday night, Wright Dorm continued their tradition of having their Homecoming representative chosen as Queen.

Christmas

Christmas at Louisburg this year found Louisburg students reaching beyond their college community in that traditional season of good cheer. Of course there were a few private parties, but the biggest and best party was not restricted to Louisburg students. A large number of students and faculty joined together to produce a Christmas party for over 110 underprivileged children. Under the direction of the Students for Christian Life, the college community raised over $1200 to give this party and present each of the children a gift selected especially for each of them. Santa Claus arrived at the end of the party to present these gifts.

At the party, entertainment came in all forms. Some of the kids competed for dollar bills and candy bars by taking part in a yo-yo contest. Pam Reams and Clem Sturdivant entertained with some original dance routines. There were several good singing groups that performed. And there was plenty of party food as well as a gigantic tree with dazzling lights and shiny tinsel. For the students present, perhaps the best part of the whole evening was the moment they caught a glimpse of the twinkle in the childrens' eyes.

Hey BLMOC, what do you think about while you're on the course.
"You think about alot of things while you're out there."

Of all the millions that play golf few play it well — some observers have even scanned it as no sport at all. But only those few that do play well know the concentration, the skill and most of all the dedication that the game requires. We feel sure tha the traits that we have acquired while here at Louisburg played a major role in the comebacks of both the golf team and Jimmy Scott. We learned how to love and be loved, act like winners as well as be winners, and carry with us these unforgettable memories of the past two years.

CARS! Just think how different life at Lou-U. would be without the miraculous auto. The thought of how just a small weather beaten old Volkswagen can brighten up an otherwise dull weekend can amaze even the most depressed of us.

The SGA members this year were elected last Spring, except for Lee Gillis. When Bill Roughton became ineligible for the presidency, Jan Moses took his place as President. The students elected Lee Gillis to fill her place. The full slate of officers are as follows: Jan Moses, President; Lee Gillis, Vice President Marian Satterwhite, Treasurer (opposite page); Bert Sigmon, Chief Justice (above right); and Susan Davis, Secretary (above).

The SGA

One night this past winter, photographer David Coleman captured on film SGA President Jan Moses' tape fight with Herb Paschal. We did catch Jan in a more serious mood later when she gave us these comments on the successes and failures of the SGA this year.

"This year's SGA has been successful in a number of areas. Yet there are other areas in which we have not reached our expectations.

In the area of entertainment, we have had a good number of accomplishments. The Coffee House Program that we set up has been a tremendous success. The purpose of the coffee house was to give students either a break from studying or going down the street to the local beer joint. Also, the SGA decided upon running the full length movies on Sunday night instead of Friday night so that more students would be able to see them.

One of the best accomplishments of the SGA and the RA's has been the establishment of the Open House Program. The program is a workable solution to the problem of dorm visitation.

Talent shows are now traditional around Louisburg College. The SGA and the Class Officers have put in many hours planning and preparing for these shows. Louisburg has a great deal of talent and each talent show reinforces this fact more strongly.

Since there are many students who can not go home on the weekends, an outing club has been formed by the Entertainment Committee. This club had plans to travel various places on the weekends.

Our biggest failure this year was in not being able to offer the students anything that would bring the student body together as a whole. There are a certain number of students working for one cause, while yet another group is working for another cause. The SGA has failed insofar as getting the students interested or involved in one thing or another. There are not enough outlets for the student's creativity or concern."

MORE FROM JAN

"THE ROLE OF THE SGA is that of being the voice of the students. Students have needs and desires and it is up to the SGA to make them known. The administration has goals for Louisburg, too. This is where the problem arises. The SGA lies in the middle of these two groups and we encounter a great deal of opposition when trying to please the students or administration. However, the problem concerning the administration has improved over that of last year because we are now working with the administration instead of around them.

Remember that change is slow, especially when that change is something that affects you directly."

The OAK asked COLUMNS Editor Dean Hobbs to reflect upon his year as editor of the paper. Below are Dean's reflections.

The task of printing a newspaper on a small college campus has been a strenuous but enjoyable one. Oftentimes the student apathy would begin to override so strongly that the desire of the minority to accomplish something would seem quashed. COLUMNS has attempted to provide an open forum for the exchange and expansion of student ideas and comment. We have never closed ourselves off from letters, ideas, or comments from students, faculty, or members of the Administration. As editor, I have not felt that the purpose of the newspaper was to praise all students and condemn anything and everything the Administration does. Some students would probably want this, but the student newspaper was not founded for the purpose of criticizing those in control for everything they do.

The staff and editors have done what is necessary for a successful newspaper. The only shortcoming was the lack of student response and involvement in the production of the paper. I can take consolation in knowing that this is the case in nearly all college activities, and after studying some of the papers from other colleges, I am extremely proud of the well-planned and well-written issues of COLUMNS that we have produced.

Tourney Time

All the fans gathered around the diamond to cheer our baseball team on to Colorado for the national finals. After many play-off games, they were on their way. The fans that couldn't accompany the team to Colorado listened to the games on the radio. Yes folks, the tournament was broadcast all the way from Colorado to Louisburg.

Fans listened as the team won third place in the National Championship. Through much discipline, hard work, sacrifice, practice, skill and the will to win, Louisburg College Baseball Team earned the status of one of the best baseball teams in the country. Yes people, the entire Nation.

We are truly proud of our "Canes".

Graduation

"It would have to rain today!"

"Hey, is my cap on straight?"

"I can't get this collar on right."

"What side does the tassel go on?"

"Where does the line begin?"

"I wish we would hurry and start."

"Are you number 43?"

"Does your last name begin with G?"

"You're graduating? But I thought you were a Freshman?"

"Get ready, we're about to go in."

"Man is this gown hot!"

"This is the longest four years I have ever had."

"How far is it from here to the beach?"

"Where can I float a loan for my bills?"

Then everyone sat down and the ceremony begin –
Everyone waiting for their turn to receive their diploma
Everyone waiting to get out
Finally your name is called and you hurry to the stage
Soon it is over
No more pictures
Hunger sets in . . .

Across the street the food was waiting . . .
All ate, said their good byes . . .

And you were gone . . .

A Banquet for Dr. Robbins

Dr. Cecil W. Robbins retired from his position as President of Louisburg College this year. Dr. Robbins had been President for twenty years.

Upon his retirement, a banquet was given in his honor. The topic of the program was "Dr. Cecil W. Robbins, This Is Your Life."

Members of the staff, faculty, administration, alumni and student body, along with his family, were present to honor him.

Dr. Robbins was presented a gift of a trip to the Holy Land. The Chapel Choir presented a special music program and thus the banquet was a success. We all thank you, Dr. Robbins.

Message From the Editors

You talk to me about so-and-so and I'll tell you all I know about "you know who" and we'll keep each other pacified for hours since we can't think about ourselves and our faults if we are talking about someone else. Nothing can touch us — we are immortal as long as we strut about like false love in the chicken yard. A chicken with his steel beam neck never notices the other fowl around. How many individual chicken faces do we recognize in retrospect? Are we satisfied to drop our pellets and not look back? Two years in the same barnyard — what have we left besides chicken tracks? What have we left besides each other?

The good will outlive the bad, but who knows the lifespan of a memory? This volume may preserve some of them beyond their welcome; others will be as uneraseable as the ink on each page. If you'll pardon my French, these pages "are the stuff that dreams are made of." For once in our lives we shouldn't be afraid to be children, so hide this book safely beneath your pillow, tell your memory "goodnight" and dream of a way to tell six-hundred plus — "I loved you"

— Bert Sigmon

Hauntingly shallow, yet fathoming depth:
the wind roars on like the flying lion
 in my mythological mind's eye,
Pushing me through dark and light,
Aiding my way through night and day.

Powerful, though kind enough to be gentle,
Knowing that somewhere on route
I must stop to rest for awhile.

Then suddenly picking my mind over,
Looking for the signs of my weariness
Takes me in his arms, once again,
To hunt and haunt each wordly tendon and pore.

Realising there is no one place where I can rest for long,
He comforts me
As we travel on, on, on . . .

— Carol Files
